

Brandon Peay

Senior Vice President of Strategy and Business Operations

Brandon Peay is the SVP of Strategy and Business Operations at Pluralsight, the technology learning platform, Brandon joined Pluralsight in December 2014 as Head of Corp Dev and FP&A and moved into the role of Chief of Staff to the CEO in June 2015. He accepted his current position in April 2017.

Brandon Peay believes strongly in being a life-long learner. As an avid reader, he is always on the lookout for new ideas and thought pieces on leadership development, technology and business strategy. So he is a natural fit on Pluralsight's executive team where he shoulders the responsibility for strategy, business operations, partnerships and M&A. Brandon is passionate about Pluralsight's mission of creating progress through technology that lifts the human condition.

Before accepting his current role at Pluralsight, Brandon served as the Chief of Staff to the CEO, General Manager of Code School, and as Director of Corporate Development at the company. Prior to joining Pluralsight, Brandon held several positions at Bain & Company, where he helped solve a variety of strategic problems for corporation in various industries by identifying relevant insights then implementing solutions that produced results.

Brandon holds a BS in Economics from Brigham Young University and an MBA from The Wharton School of Business. He has considerable experience working in international markets and in a variety of industries including technology, health care, aerospace and defense, construction and the non-profit sector. He is actively engaged in the LDS MBA Conference, an event he co-founded in 2011.

When he's not promoting Pluralsight's mission and encouraging others to up their learning game, you'll find Brandon playing, coaching or watching sports—especially his son's flag football and basketball teams.
